WHAT BUILDING INDUSTRY MEANS TO ALL

Anything that is retarding building is to the detriment of every man, woman and child in Newmarket. Everybody benefits when buildings are going up. Not only the men in the factories where the materials were made, not only the men engaged in construction, but particularly the people in the municipality where the buildings are erected benefit. New or improved buildings increase assessment and lower taxes and rents. In addition, people in every community benefit have been strictly kept. To fulfil those promises, from the employment created in the manufacture the Jewish community in the United States built of the materials for building. Factory workers in up the most scientific, up-to-date and efficient some distant town manufacturing bricks or sashes agencies of social service in the republic. ### Unemployment And Town Council

Is unemployment entirely a problem for parliaments and legislatures, as is so often said? Or is there something municipal councils may do, to help solve this problem? Municipal councils fix the rate of taxation on real estate, and to the extent that it is possible for municipal councils to control that rate it is possible for them to deal with unemployment in the building trade. But a goodly part of any real estate tax rate is beyond the control of the council. A large part of the tax rate represents money spent by former councils (debenture payments), money levied by county council or school boards and essential expenditures that the most economical, niggardly council imaginable could not or would not avoid.

Mayor's Suggestion Sound

Every municipal council should be on the alert to see that no expenditures creep into the mill plus. rate which do not belong there. For instance, in the last year there have been suggestions that the electric light department is being operated at a loss. In other words, the loss has been absorbed advantage to a tenant. But is it? In the first place every tenant pays taxes, and higher taxes mean higher rents; and in the second place, the higher tax rate impedes building and affects the prosperity of all. We do not say that the tax rate is unnecessarily high as the result of an electric light department loss, but we do say that we should investigate such a possibility, and that Mayor Boyd's recommendation in his inaugural address that electric light accounts be kept separately is a good one.

THEIR PROBLEM—OUR OPPORTUNITY

What should Canada do about central Europe's refugee problem? A committee headed by Senator Cairine Wilson, which has been studying this problem for some time past, this week presented some suggestions to the federal government at Ottawa. The surprising, but well-supported suggestion is made that Canada can make a contribution to the solution of her unemployment problem by bringing in from Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia refugees to Canada. What kind of refugees? Are they magicians?

Refugees Nearly Half Jews

According to this committee the refugees in the three countries (or two, or maybe one, we should into an urban people. say) are 200,000 non-Aryan Christians, 125,000 Czechoslovaks, 350,000 political and religious refugees, and 600,000 Jews. Jews constitute a minority.

Convincing Arguments

selected refugees to Canada would be economic- the index for the total population is 43.7 per cent. ally advantageous to us (aside from humanitarianism), and we will quote a few of the most ary need today is not so much for more agricul-appealing arguments. "The refugees may establish some new industries and thus improve Canada's economic position. Many of the refugees are men of skill and experience all but unknown in Canada. Among such industries might be mentioned potteries, glassware, beadwork, chemicals, dyes, some forms of munitions (not bombs, we hope), novelty gloves, toys, fine leather-work, costume jewelry.

"Many of them would probably initiate new industries which would employ some of our unemployed. Sir Samuel Hoare recently stated that since 1933 the United Kingdom had received submerged classes of Europe. They are for the only on condition that they proved themselves

Special trade schools provided instruction in carpentry and joinery, wood carving, cabinet-making, working in precious metals, pottery, lock-making, certain engineering crafts, musical instrument making, chemical industry, printing, mining, glass decoration, book-binding, photography, hotel work, milling, textiles, wickerwork, tailoring, etc. Painting on porcelain and glass engraving, goldsmiths' work and jewellery, are other crafts well represented among the Czechoslovak refugees. Precious stone and fine glass engraving, goldsmiths' work and jewellery, diamond cutting are crafts in which many of the refugees engaged. In pottery industries specialists in painting and lithography, throwing and casting are available. Skill in the decoration of cloth, embroideries, wood, metal and leather with glass beads is common among women refugees. There are also craftsmen in ceramics, sculpture, bookbinding, gobelin work, locksmithing and granite and stone-cutting. The principal home industries are: (a) women's home industries, which include lace-making, embroideries, etc.; (b) wicker-work industry; and (c) toy-making industry.

"It should be noted that the responsible heads of the Jewish community in Canada have already offered to give assurances that no Jewish refugee allowed to enter Canada will ever become a public charge. Such assurances were given to the American government at the time of the persecution of the Jews in Russia, and those promises Jewish community in the dominion have strictly kept this pledge throughout the entire intervening pick up a magazine and read an which are supposed to be features period.

"Some of these potential manufacturers have already manufactured for a world market and could, if given a chance, obtain that world market for Canada.

"With a larger population, Canadian manufacturers would gain some of the advantages of mass production and thus compete more fairly with United States manufacturers.

"One of the greatest needs in Canada is that of tightly shut within my own in obstetrics. And maybe in the forest conservation or reforestation. Many of the Czech foresters worked on the government forests in the Sudetenland, and their skill is world-famous. Some of them could be advantageously placed on abandoned farms in Ontario and elsewhere, and be allowed to supplement their earnings by reforestation projects.

"A larger population in Canada will provide a better home market for those agricultural and other products of which we already create a sur-

"It would be a major contribution to the world economic impasse if under-populated countries like Canada permitted the transfer of a certain proportion of the European population to our in the tax-rate. Now that might seem like an shores, thus bringing raw materials into closer proximity with the consumer, and eliminating the uncertainty of distant markets.

"Our national economy is too precarious, largely because of the disparity between our fundamental resources and the consumption limits of our small population. Unless the world experiences an unexpected change of heart within the immediate future, we shall have to readjust our national economy to meet the new conditions, whether we accept refugees or not. That adjustment can probably be effected more readily if we did accept a fair number of refugees, adding them to our permanent population, than would be the case if we did not do so.

"Those refugees who could be settled on the land would make a desirable contribution to our agricultural economy. The Czechs are among the most skilled farmers in Europe, and those Jews who are eager to become farmers in Canada would undoubtedly be an asset to the country.

"The agricultural achievements of the Jews in Palestine have been little short of miraculous. What is more, they have shown there an unusual capacity for combining agricultural life with 'community' life, built on a 'co-operative' basis, "The Jews have become an urban people largely because they were not allowed to own the soil,

We already produce for more agricultural and dairy products than we can now consume or than we can market abroad. In the last analysis, Canada may be better advised to encourage refugees who will initiate new industries rather than those who are ready to add to our agricultural population, except in special areas."

Strong offensively, defensively, Aurora has won its average game by a 7-3 score. Catching East York before that team was organized, early in the schedule, they spoiled that team's looks, on paper, by heaving in 24 goals in two games. Since then, East York has brought in new men, and Aurora's ancient enemy now lets in only about three goals per game. WE DELIVER

"NOT A DEAD HORSE"

We take this opportunity to say thank you to the many subscribers who are giving us a vote of confidence by renewing their subscriptions to The Era.

Subscriptions run out every week in the year and subscriptions are renewed every week in the year. Not all subscribers renew their subscriptions. Some return in a month or a year, perhaps some are thoroughly fed up on rural journalism and won't come back for years, but most renew their subscriptions at the time of expiry. To all we say thank you. We try to produce a local newspaper which will merit approval and the renewal of subscriptions is the principal way of knowing whether or not we are making a tolerably good job of it.

There is nothing harsh about The Era's subscription policy. It is just an attempt to please the publio. The policy is just this, that The Era is not thrust on anyone. If a subscriber does not pay for his Era it is assumed that he does not want it any longer. Occasionally, someone doesn't want to miss even a few weeks but is not in a position to pay the subscription for a month or so. Such a subscriber advises The Era, and the paper is sent on until the agreed time has elapsed, when, according to our experience, payment is invariably made. But even by request no subscriber is allowed to get into debt for The Era for more than a short period. The reason is that paying for last year's news is like paying for a dead horse, and The Era does not want to be regarded as such.
